More than Thirty New Casual Game Titles Added to Arkadium's Game Library this Year

From creative twists on classics to completely new game concepts, Arkadium heads into 2009 with a growing library of new games

New York – December 16, 2008 – Arkadium (www.arkadium.com), a game solutions developer for the advergaming and casual game markets, today announced the completion of over thirty new casual games added to its growing library this year. In addition to Multiplayer Pool and Turbo Mah Jongg, Arkadium has also launched Avant Grid, a strategic grid painting game, Dot Matrix Mayhem, an engaging puzzle of deduction and Photo Recall, a challenging photo recollection game, as well as many others. All games are Flash-based, do not require a download to play and most are now available online at Arkadium's Great Day Games (www.greatdaygames.com).

With the introduction of these new games, Arkadium continues to increase its library of owned IP games. A number of the company's growing list of clients including Sony Pictures Television International, Hearst Digital Magazines, myYearbook, AARP and Publishers Clearing House have already been able to take advantage of the newer games in Arkadium's game library, as all games titles are available for licensing and can be re-branded to fit the needs and/or requirements of the licensee. Please contact Arkadium for further details. A partial list of new games is below.
